

GLOBAL STORIES - Blog and Community

We are looking for contributors to our collective blog

© Ana Druga

“You must not lose faith in humanity. Humanity is like an ocean; if a few drops of the ocean are dirty, the ocean does not become dirty.”

- Mahatma Ghandi

In a world of increasing challenges and conflicts GLOBAL STORIES is a virtual meeting place and community for people who believe that a better future is still possible. Who are interested in solutions and how to move in the right direction. The vision behind this blog and community is to create a hub for people with a global mindset, who inspire each other to take action - from wherever they are, with whatever they have.

GLOBAL STORIES focusses on what works. The blog is a collaborative venture with a core team of contributors on each continent, who collect and share relevant texts, photos and videos. We are sourcing news, views and issues with a global Impact and discuss them with the community.

The subject matters range from personal stories to interviews with global leaders and young doers to technology and politics. They include tales about how artists can change the world and the Dalai Lama's advice for the young generation. Stories are collective wisdom. The aim is to create a story bank with a wealth of hope and inspiration.

We are currently looking for members of our core team of bloggers. You should have experience with writing and the ability to collect and coordinate stories from other contributors in your region. Please send an email to blog@claudiarinke.com.

Together we can create a new global story about a just and peaceful world with opportunities for everybody.

GLOBAL STORIES is curated by Claudia Rinke.

For more information www.claudiarinke.com